Before president Nelson Mandela warded off the challenge of the orphaned followers of the former SACP general secretary, the late Chris Hani, socialism was the buzzword for the ANC-SACP Cosatu Alliance.

When it was obligatory for the ANC to be radical, this deification of state control with its attendant efficiencies (inefficiencies?) and the celebration of centralised planning, Mandela jettisoned it at Davos.

According to my former editor, Allister Sparks, Mandela, on returning from the World Economic Forum meeting in Davos in 1992, called in key ANC officials and said: "Chaps, we've got to change (our policy with regards to nationalisation)."

Researchers can see the frequency of search terms within sets of content to begin identifying central themes and assessing how individuals, events, and ideas interact and develop over time.
