Have you thought about digital resources for this topic?

Gale Primary Sources
Start at the source.

19th Century
UK Periodicals

Over 3.2 million

A Visit to Chu-hsien and Wan-hsien.

HAVING been asked to superintend the work at the above-named two stations of the Mission, the Rev. A. C. Fallwell-Turner, writing on Nov. 9th, informs me that he left the latter on the 1st, and arrived on the 3rd at the former. He found the new Native Superintendent, Mr. Hwu, who had been appointed by the Mission, unwell. Mr. Hwu’s assistant, Mr. Choo, who is about twenty miles distant from Huating, our missionary brethren both with their native helpers, Mr. Yu and Mr. Liu, and also two native servants. We take up our Turner’s mission at the point where he mentions the arrival of the party at Chu-hsien.

CHU-HSIEN.

“Chu-hsien is partly situated by the river side, but part of the city was on a hill, and therefore it was necessary to erect high up, across the North Gate, a large street. Chu-hsien, being fifty miles from T’ai huai to Chu-hsien by way of the bullet road, was from the gate to Woe taken 9 miles, and at Tang...”

EMPOWER™ RESEARCH
The 19th century was a time of revolutionary change and expansion. Britain was one of the world’s first industrial, urban superpowers and developed a press to feed the demands of its increasingly literate population: 19th Century UK Periodicals covers the events, lives, values and themes that shaped the nineteenth-century world.

For more information on this archive, visit gale.com/searchukperiodicals