Process to a broad range of previously first centuries. The collection brings together the most sensitive documents from all the presidential libraries and numerous executive agencies in a single, easily searchable database.

The collection is the most comprehensive compilation of declassified documents from the executive branch. The types of materials include intelligence studies, policy papers, diplomatic correspondence, cabinet meeting minutes, briefing materials, and domestic surveillance and military reports. The collection editors have actively monitored the release of formerly classified documents from presidential libraries....

Aid programs to Iraq outlined

Assistance shown in the above table is for j regional projects administered through the Baghdad Pact. In the next few years, this figure is likely to be considerably larger. In addition to the above, the above export from the Bank for International Settlements, which has a credit of $300,000 with the Bank, is not yet due. Iraq has not yet advanced payment for assistance from the World Bank. The United Nations Expanded Program of Technical Assistance in Iraq is currently run at the annual rate of rather more than $3.5 million. The Memorandum of Understanding with Great Britain provides that military equipment and training should be provided by the British. Beginning in 1954 and with the agreement with the British, the United States has begun a military aid program for the Iraqi Army and Navy. About 60% of the equipment has been purchased in Britain. When the Crown Prince of Iraq and the Vice Chief of Staff of the Iraq Air Force declined to fly the E.O. 123 I.A. Z 4143, 3. S. 1. T. 7...
